From the New York Herald of Saturday 29th.—Extra.
Total Destruction of the National Theatre, with all the Scenery, Dresses, Properties, &c.

This morning at 7 o'clock precisely, a second and, we lament to say, a successful attempt was made to destroy the National Theatre, in Church street. In the Herald of this day, we gave an account of the discovery, by the Manager, of fire in six different places, on Friday, which were subdued, and the performances went on without any further alarm. At the close of the performance, Mr. Burton, with Mr. Wemyss and Russell, remained on the premises until about half past three, and had a thorough search through every part, and it appeared perfectly safe. Mr. Russell then retired to his room in the theatre, and went to bed. He shortly rose after six o'clock, and went to the stage door in the rear of the building, and stood in conversation with the private watchman of the establishment. Whilst thus occupied, something was seen to fall from one of the upper rooms; and in a very few moments, flames were seen to proceed from several different parts of the building. The alarm was instantly given; but so rapid was the progress of the destruction, that it was with difficulty Mr. Russell rescued his wife, who was in bed. As it was, she was carried out, rolled up in the bed clothes, as the slightest delay would have endangered lives of all those intent on rescuing her.

Not a vestige of the wardrobe was saved. Some of the banners and stage preparations were got out by the property man, and the boxes, books and papers in the counting house were got off.

It was reported that some firemen had been buried beneath the rear wall, which fell shortly after the conflagration was at the height, but we could not trace the rumour to any authentic source, so we hope it is unfounded.

Mr. Burton is a severe sufferer by this calamity; all his private wardrobe had been removed from Philadelphia within a few days, and some of it only arrived on Friday. He also loses all the dress and scenery made for the Naid Queen and Semiramis, besides other valuable property in the shape of books, manuscripts, music, &c.

Many of the performers are also severe losers, particularly Miss Cushman, who lost a large part of her valuable wardrobe. Messrs. Shaw and Howard also lost all their stage ornaments and dresses.

The walls of the building were so scandalously weak, that the lives of the firemen were considered in danger from the first breaking out of the fire.

Mr. John T. Rollins, one of the most intelligent engineers of the fire department, states that he lives close by the theatre, and was on the spot in a very few minutes—say, five—that he went inside the theatre immediately, and saw no fire except on the stage and scenery, which was then blazing; there was then no fire in front of the proscenium; and it is his opinion that the fire was placed on the stage or near the scenes, in less than half an hour from the time he first saw it. Such is the general opinion; because fire does not smoulder long in the neighborhood of theatrical scenery before it runs like a lighted train of gunpowder.

The Chief Engineer says that before the fire burst through the box doors, and within fifteen minutes of its discovery, he saw it breaking through at the back of the theatre. He warned all the people living in the rear to clear out, because in less than five minutes after the fire broke out at the rear he saw the miserably flimsy wall cracking and yielding in every part, unable to bear the weight of the roof. And before the inmates of the house of ill-fame in the rear, kept by Julia Brown, had time to make their escape, the wall gave way, fell on Julia Brown's house, crushed the back part, killed one young and beautiful girl, aged 16, named Margaret Yager, who came from Philadelphia last Tuesday.

The rear wall and the side wall on Franklin st. both gave way in so short a time after the fire began, that it was by the mercy of Providence alone that numbers were not crushed to death in the adjoining houses. The mortar all from the bricks, and they looked as clean almost as when new; and the whole building was down to the ground in less than one hour, except part of the front wall and the side wall on Leonard street. But these bulged out so much and looked so slim and ghastly, that the engineers were preparing to pull them down at 11 o'clock, in order to save the lives of the passers by.

The property was owned we understand in this way:—

Ground owned by Mr. Aymar.
Mr. Moran holds a mortgage of $10,000 on the building.

The young girl who was killed presented a sad spectacle. She was lying on the floor of the back attic, the roof of which was all gone, and the whole open to the light of day. Surrounded by bricks and mortar, and pieces of burnt timber, there lay that young and recently innocent girl, with nothing around her small limbs but her night dress, her side crushed in near her heart, her mild blue eyes, open in death, apparently gazing on the blue vault of heaven above her, her very beautiful fair hair streaming dishevelled down her neck and bosom, then white and cold as the Parian marble; and yet from the smile playing around her mouth, it seemed impossible to realize that she was dead—so young—so fair—so guilty and so early called. Around her stood one or two of her former companions in shame, weeping bitterly, and the groupe was made up of the toil-worn smoke-covered firemen, who had extricated her mangled remains from the ruins around her.

So much for building slight walls to a theatre.

Twelve o'clock—Messrs. Burton and Russell are at this time before the police magistrates, making their statement of the calamity under oath, and we expect that the incendiaries will be traced and brought to justice.

The French Protestant Episcopal Church was injured in the roof by fire, and in the interior by water. The dwelling houses next it, Nos. 103, 105, and 107, Franklin street, were damaged by the fall of the wall of the theatre, and the Dutch Reformed church in Franklin street, adjoining No. 107, took fire also in the roof, but was soon extinguished. The African church, on the corner of Leonard and Church streets, opposite the theatre, caught also in the roof, but the fire was soon checked there, and with little damage.

WOOD TYPE.

Cut by Machinery, and warranted superior to any heretofore manufactured.

GEORGE F. NESBITT, Tontine building, corner of Wall and Water streets, New-York, respectfully informs the Printers of the United States, that he has now in full operation his machine for cutting Wood Types, which being an entire new invention, is warranted to cut Types, both plain and ornamental, far superior to any heretofore exhibited to the public; and in proof of the assertion, informs the public that he has obtained Diplomas and Medals from both the American and Mechanic's Institutes of the City of New-York, at their Fairs of 1836, 1838, and 1839, as the books of the Institute will show.

George F. Nesbitt would particularly invite the attention of Printers to the fact, that through the politeness of the proprietors of the Liverpool and Havre line of packets, he has been favored with the latest French and English specimens, that many of the new styles in them are very handsome, and have been got up by him; they were exhibited by him at the Mechanic's Fair in this city, now just closed and pronounced by the Committee of Printers, appointed to examine Types and Specimens, to be superior to any Wood Types ever before exhibited, and having a decided advantage over large Metal Types.

George F. Nesbitt, would also inform the Printers of the United States, that he is ready to cut Types on Wood of any size, from 5 lines Pica, upward, from any of the patterns of small or Types contained in the extensive specimen of Messrs. G. Bruce & Co., or from any new pattern that can be suggested.

George F. Nesbitt is desirous that Printers, and those becoming Agents, should be acquainted with the fact, that his prices are much reduced from those heretofore charged by other manufacturers; that he allows his Agents thirty per cent. commission; that his terms are six months or ten per cent. discount for cash.

Agents are wanted for the following cities, viz: Charleston, Albany, Detroit, Rochester, and Buffalo.

N. B. Printers of Newspapers, who will publish the above for six times, within three months from this date, and will send me a copy of their paper, shall be entitled to $3 in Types; and should the Types not prove superior to any ever before manufactured, they can be returned, and the money will be paid in place of them.

Hence it is apparent, that if the Whigs are united, they can have every thing in their own way, in both Houses. One of the two vacancies in Pa. will be filled by a Whig, and the other by a Loco. Illinois will probably send Stuart and Cacey, Whigs; and Reynolds, V. B.
